Boat

Why should you have boat insurance?

With our boat insurance, you can feel secure if something should happen to your boat, whether it is at sea or on land.

What's always included in your insurance

Naturally, the insurance policy covers you as the boat owner, but it also covers the boat even if you lend it to someone. Below are some examples of events for which you can receive reimbursement through your insurance.

Damage at sea

When the boat is at sea, you can receive compensation for grounding, collision, capsizing or other sudden, unforeseen and externally triggered event.

Damage during craning, storage on land, or while being transported

You can receive compensation if the boat is damaged while stored on land, or while it is being launched, pulled out of the water or transported.

Fire damage

The insurance policy covers damage to the boat caused by fire, lightning or explosion.

Theft and vandalism

If your boat, motor or accessories are stolen or vandalized.

Liability

If you cause third-party injuries, property or person, you may be liable for damages. Liability covers not only you as the owner, but also anyone who uses the boat with your permission. If you receive a claim for damages, we will help you

- investigate whether you are liable for damages,
- negotiate with the person claiming damages,
- represent you in the event of a trial and pay your legal costs and the damages for which you are liable.

Legal assistance

If you as boat owner, or someone using the boat with your permission, become involved in a legal dispute, you can get reimbursement for an attorney and court expenses.
